Johnny Appleseed*

*Apple seed – яблочное семечко

Once upon a time, there lived a boy in a small town in Massachusetts, in America. His name was John Chapman. He grew up on the farm. His father had a lot of work and he helped his father a lot. He liked working in the field and feeding the animals, but his favourite place on the farm was the apple orchard. John liked to take care of the trees and pick apples from the trees in autumn most of all.

John wanted to go and live in the West, but his father didn't like this idea and told him that there were no apple trees in the West. Johnny said, "Then I will bring apples to the people there. I will plant all kinds of apples - red, yellow and green."

One day Johnny started his long trip to the West. He took books and a big bag of apple seeds on his back. He planted seeds in all places where he came: in small villages and large villages, in small towns and large towns. All people loved him, because he was kind and friendly. He told stories to children, fed animals and helped everyone.
